We all know that the history of the Caucasian race, during the last three centuries, has been marked by a kind of intellectual development so entirely without precedent that some might call it miraculous; in fact, by such a development of the understanding of the course of nature as has revolutionized human society in many of its phases. You also know that this development has been marked by frequent collisions of opinion between the investigators of the material manifestations of nature on the one side (if I may be allowed to use the expression), and philosophers and theologians on the other, respecting the true theory of the course of nature. My desire in entering this field is to act the part of the peacemaker rather than that of a combatant, not sustaining any other propositions than those which are actually believed in by the large majority of educated men at the present time; but the confusion of thought on this subject, to which I have just alluded, is so great that, although I may combat no opinions actually held, it may be necessary to greatly modify their application, and to criticise the forms in which they have found expression. The key-note of my discourse is found in a proposition which is fundamental in the history of modern science, and without a clear understanding of which everything I say may be entirely...
