Acts. --It is clear that the principles which pertain to an actual adverse possession must govern in determining whether the possession of a claimant is of such a character as must be deemed to impute knowledge to the true owner, for it is a rule that, in the absence of actual knowledge, the adverse occupancy must be such as would impute such knowledge. To give such notice it is required that the occupancy must be of such a character, at least, as to put the legal owner upon inquiry as to the title of the occupant. 18. *Sackor v.
