There is hardly a neighborhood, for several counties around, where he was not known, and his memory revered. Even yet we hear him spoken of as the best man that ever lived in this country. He lived to see the small Society which he first joined in this county, grow into a large congregation, and the old church torn down, and a commodious house of worship erected in its stead. He loved the Church of God, and was never absent when able to attend public worship. He often said, with burning emphasis, I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than dwell in the tents of wickedness. When his first and second wives were dead, and his children and grandchildren were married and gone; in his extreme old age--ninety-three years old--he was induced to accept a home in my fathers house,...
