The Construction of a cold storage ice house, and the tools and methods employed for cutting and housing the ice, as well as the benefits to be secured, will be considered. Only such facts as have stood the test of practical experience, and which are within the limits usually attained by those who have good cold storage in use from year to year, will be presented. These results are only attainable by properly constructed storage houses, sufficient supply of ice, correct condition of articles when placed in cool room, length of time they are kept there and cleanliness. Cold storage houses, not...
